FAMILY LOCKDOWN GUIDE: IDEAS TO KEEP YOUR KIDS BUSY DURING CORONAVIRUS CLOSURES

From Kids Post as part of the Washington Post

With schools closed and learning at home, you probably feel cut off from friends and your usual activities. And perhaps in need of a creative break. Children’s authors and illustrators are coming to the rescue. “Lunch Doodles” started Monday and by Thursday had 3.5 million views. That’s a lot of eager artists!

Join author/illustrator Mo Willems for his online video series, “Lunch Doodles,” every weekday at 1 p.m.

Publishers: Videos of story times, author interviews and drawing demonstrations; flash cards; activity sheets; reading guides — most publishers have content for kids, educators and parents on their websites. Here are three:
